WHAT ARE YOU READING?

Did you know that January 16th is Appreciate a Dragon Day? This celebration day was established in 2004 by Donita K. Paul to celebrate the publication of her book Dragon Spell. She encourages everyone to grab a book and learn more about dragons. Here are a few titles that were read over the holiday break.

All of these titles are available for free as e-books.

My Father's Dragon

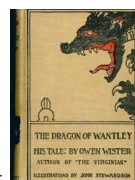

By Ruth Stiles Gannett is a children's classic.

It is a quick read that has interesting travel equipment!

The Dragon Painter by Mary McNeil Fenollosa is a story set in Tokyo about art and love. One of the main characters paints dragons. A tragic story that has a surprise ending.

The Dragon of Wantley by Owen

Wister is set in the Middle Ages. It is funny and has a knight who thinks he is smart, his daughter (who really is the smart one) and a set of thieves.

This is another quick read.

The Dragon's Secret by Augusta Huiell Seaman is set on the beach in New England in October. It is a mystery. Half of the people in the book are looking for a box shaped like a dragon and the rest have found a box shaped like a dragon and are trying to find out who it belongs to. This is very similar to a Nancy Drew mystery.

The Place of Dragons

by William LeQueux is another mystery.

This one is set in England and the detective travels to Paris, Brussels, Italy, and Algiers in pursuit of a jewelry theft ring and information on the murder of a person at the beginning of the book.

There are many books about dragons. Take a minute in January and read about one, just for fun!

Library Technology Helpful Hints

GOOGLE CALENDAR!

Get your semester off to a great start! Using Google Calendar can help you stay organized. All students can create a Google Calendar. KCU is a Google campus and your email will allow you to set up a calendar.

With Google Calendar you can keep track of your class schedule, test dates and assignments from your syllabi, and all of your campus activities.

You can also create a calendar and share it with others if you are in a group or organization that meets regularly.

Having trouble getting your calendar set up? Stop by the Library and we can help!
