

Links to assorted materials available online

These items are available online as indicated

An edited collection of articles on teaching reading and writing together in a variety of classes and making good use of library resources.

- Horning, A.S. & Kraemer, E.W. (Eds.). (2013). Reconnecting reading and writing. Anderson, SC: Parlor Press and The WAC Clearinghouse. Retrieved from <http://wac.colostate.edu/books/reconnecting/>
- A site for the national study of student writing showing how and to what extent students make use of materials they read on paper or screen in their research writing. The Citation Project. Retrieve at <http://site.citationproject.net/>
- Information about the assessment tool focused on students' levels of information literacy is available through Project SAILS. Project SAILS. (2009). Standardized assessment of information literacy skills. Kent State University, 2000–2009. Retrieved from <https://www.projectsails.org/>.
- A different standardized test of information literacy is available from Educational Testing Service. Information about the instrument and ordering, costs and other materials are at the ETS website. The iSkills Assessment. http://www.ets.org/iskills/about?WT.mc_id=iskills_19757_pubgd&WT.srch=1&...
- A special issue of ATD: Across the Disciplines in late 2013 was devoted to Reading Across the Curriculum. The eight articles can be found at this link. <http://wac.colostate.edu/atd/reading/index.cfm>
- Head, A. J. (2013). How freshmen conduct course research once they enter college. University of Washington, Seattle, Washington, Retrieved from http://projectinfolit.org/pdfs/PIL_2013_FreshmenStudy_FullReport.pdf