Info and Insights

Allow me to re-introduce Head Coach, Joshua Miller. Coach Miller is returning as head coach of the women's soccer team. After being away for six years, he is ready to get back to being around his family and coach with his twin brother, Jeremy Miller.

While Coach Miller was here from 2010-2015, the women's soccer program was doing very well. They were winning more than in recent years, and they even had a winning season. If you have kept up with the program in the past few years, you would know that is a big deal. With that in mind, I asked Coach Miller about the goals he has for the new team and he said, "I want us to compete well in the AAC conference that we currently compete in, and in a few years, I want to make positive runs in the postseason." As a former player on the women's team, I was pleased to hear that his goals are positive and realistic. I was also pleased to hear that he is very excited about "the challenge of building a family dynamic and competitive team back into the soccer program" because that is exactly what this program needs.

Coach Miller has a lot of experience under his belt and he has had his fair share of coaches to know what to do and what not to do. I have also had my fair share and after interviewing and getting to know Coach Miller, I believe that he will do great things at KCU... again.

Coach Miller comes from a ministry family where great Christlike examples were set for him every day. Miller says that he had a great childhood during which he and his family bounced around between Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana. After growing up in these states, it seems only fitting that he would later go to college at Cincinnati Christian University where he majored in Youth Ministry. Throughout the years, Miller discovered "his passion to serve others and his want to help others learn and grow in their personal and spiritual lives." Since his first coaching job at Cincinnati Christian, Miller has coached at several other programs and has gained ample knowledge and experience in this position.
